Christian Science Military Ministry 1917-2004
by Kim M. Schuette

What a wonderful book! I read for an hour and one half last night and didn't want to stop!

Thank you for a magnificent book! You've kept me enthralled. I've even shed some tears of inspiration. Have been inspired in the past many times, but cannot remember shedding tears over that inspiration. After skimming the book very quickly when I first received it, am now reading—almost studying it page by page. It will remain on my bookshelf, I expect, for many years to come as I continue to return to it for reminders of the good done by so many, as well as reviewing the details you so expertly researched to share a most important history of what so many did meeting the needs of thousands—not only students of Christian Science, but those of many other religious and non-religious backgrounds, as well.

[My husband] appreciated reading about all that the chaplains had to deal with and how they worked with non-Scientists to resolve different issues. It has helped me, too, in talking about Christian Science with strangers at the Reading Room.

I just finished reading the book on my recent vacation, and I just think it is so well done and such a wonderful contribution to our Cause. Certainly one thing it did for me was remind me to keep widening my concept of church to include continuous interface with other denominations to contribute more to the religious welfare of our community.

I had some time the other night as I was waiting at the airport to pick up my daughter. So I was able to get started on this book. I am so impressed already with your style, your research, your whole mission. This is such an important work!

[My wife] and I have both read [Schuette's] book and we enjoyed it greatly. What a timeless gift he gave us all. The chaplain story might have been forgotten without his research. And his writing style is a pleasure to read. I've strongly recommended it to at least 20 of my email friends nationwide.
