

Exchange

Have infinite exchange! The ordinary symbol for exchange is money. The ancient prophets understood this proposition. Jesus demonstrated exchange as infinity reproducing itself. He presented himself as the very exchange of mortality for immortality.

Exchanging water for wine, he began his demonstration of the infinite. Symbols are everywhere and in multi-form. Turning over the tables in the temple, he illustrated an absolute need for right exchange. Every belief must be replaced with understanding. There are no material things, only thoughts symbolizing higher ideals. That's how Jesus saw them.

Everything in human thought does need to be exchanged, and the initial step in that process is recognizing things as thoughts - symbols leading to a spiritual sense of reality. They will then appear in heavenly form on earth as they already are in heaven.

A thought can always be lifted to a higher thought until it reaches its ideal. And beliefs are made better beliefs until they dissolve into harmony and immortality.

Exchange in this way is a very natural aspect of consciousness. To human sense it represents an awakening to a more real identity and being. In Science it is the forever coming of Christ. (See S&H)

Loving a neighbor as oneself models the perfect exchange. Thought rises higher without effort. Melt gently into the spiritual idea of God. Love everywhere. Love is the vehicle for higher attainment.

Symbols of exchange are meant to be identified with their ideals. Once understood in this way the exchange is a joy that actually reaches high heaven.

Simple and loving yet powerful and meaningful!
